Learning outcomes

Knowledge

The course intends to offer to the student an overview of the basic political events and socio-cultural developments of the Greek history, from the 2nd millennium to the beginning of the Hellenistic period (36 hours) and at the same time to provide an example of the methodological approach to the study of Greek History. The main aspects and developments of Greek history will be addressed through a source-based approach. This year we will explore the institutional history of Athens by a thorough analysis of the ancient sources.

Students who attend the course are also warmly invited to a series of web seminars ("Lezioni di Storia Antica online") which the lecturer organizes in collaboration with other members of the Department and which aim at introducing the students to the field of the academic research.

Assessment criteria of knowledge

During the oral exam the student must be able to demonstrate his/her knowledge of the course material and to explain correctly the main topics presented during the course. The oral report aims at showing the capacity of the student to conduct basic bibliographical research and to expose the results to the class.

Methods:

- Final oral exam
- Oral presentations (optional; on a passage or a subject related to the course and to be approved by the lecturer)

Further information:

80% final oral exam 20% oral report

Skills

At the end of the course the students will be able to know the basic facts of Greek political history. Beside this, the students will improve their skill in interpreting texts and more generally dealing with ancient sources which refer to this period.

Assessment criteria of skills

The assessment will be done in two phases:

- Final oral exam
- Oral presentation (optional: interim's check)

Behaviors

At the end of the course and of his readings, the student will be able to acquire a basic knowledge of the political and socio-cultural history of the Greeks until the age of Alexander the Great and to improve his competence in interpreting ancient texts. The option of an oral presentation in front of the rest of the class will allow the student to develop his teaching ability and to face a proper scientific discussion.

Assessment criteria of behaviors

Students are warmly invited by the lecturer to take an active part in the course with questions, observations and oral presentations. An active participation to the course and to the seminars ("Lezioni di Storia Antica") is considered very important for the evaluation of the students.

Prerequisites

A basic knowledge of ancient Greek and Latin is very welcome. It is possible to attend the course even if the student has no knowledge of these languages, but in this case the student should attend the course and contact the lecturer, who will suggest additional assignments.
